Invest in a wine cellar to enable your bottles of wine to stand the test of time.

As drinkers will be well aware, wine, as a beverage, is very temperamental and if not stored correctly it can quickly spoil and become undrinkable, especially if the bottle is corked.

However, if bottles of wine are stored in the correct manner, they will not only maintain their quality but the intensity of the wine's aroma, flavour and complexity will improve as it matures. Therefore, for those who collect vintage bottles of wine, or those who just get a bit carried away at the supermarket, it would be wise to invest in a wine cellar. Cellars not only enable users to control the temperature but it also protects the bottles from potentially harmful external influences.

Dragon Cellars have been designing and installing wine cellars since 2007 so are well versed in the benefits of having one. Cleverly named, the company has called itself after the ancient mythological creature that is renowned for guarding treasure, or in this case wine. With years of experience, Dragon Cellars is able to meet your every whim and create a cellar that will meet your personal requirements and specifications, no matter how large or small your available space is. Their years of experience in the trade mean that their cellars achieve an ideal balance between practicality and style, which will result in drinkers wanting to keep their collection on display so that everyone can admire it, rather than hiding it away.

Dragon Cellars Provides unique wine care solutions

Dragon Cellars has been operating in Spain for the past 3 years providing exclusive custom wine cellars, and now they have decided to cater to the international market. Their focus has been to provide "turnkey" projects for the storage and enjoyment of wine for both top residential and commercial clients. Their racking systems come in a wide variety of materials, styles and uses from "redwood" which is more traditional to stainless steel and glass for a more contemporary look.

Each cellar is designed specifically for what that client is looking for and what they value creating the perfect balance between aesthetics and technical aspects for wine conservation.

Over the past years, the market has defined the "typical" client profile both in home projects, as well as in restaurants. Residential clients are those that have a keen passion for wine, are interested in having their own space to store and display wine and are looking for a professional company to provide an integral solution. Likewise, restaurants that are being reformed or are in construction that wants to emphasize their wine focus and list, create a special ambience with their cellar and differentiate themselves from the competition, are Dragon Cellars' candidates. In both cases, clients are looking for something different from the standard refrigerated wine cabinets or modular racking.
